Films were an early tool in public health education. This photograph from 1913 shows the titles of films being shown in the “Moving Picture Show at the [Kentucky] State Fair by the Jefferson County Board of Health and the Fiscal Court of Jefferson County – a part of the state-wide campaign for better health conditions.” From the Rockefeller Foundation Archives

By 1926 the use of film in public health education had spread to Bangkok. As an International Health Board report noted, “The Sanitary Campaign Division in Siam has established recently at its office grounds an out-of-door public cinema theater. In addition to showing health reels, illustrated lectures and health demonstrations are given. The above photograph was taken at a performance on the night of June 23, [1926] at the time a demonstration of an anti-cholera inoculation was taking place. Observe volunteers crowding onto the platform to follow the leader who may be wincing a little as the hypodermic needle penetrates the skin.” From the Rockefeller Foundation Archives

“Showing the crowd at the same cinema show (see explanation on previous page [above]). H.S.H. Prince Sakol, Director General of the Department of Public Health, who is an ardent advocate of public health education, may be seen seated in the back ground with a band of mourning around his arm. The cinema machine is located in the cupola of the octagonal building.” From the Rockefeller Foundation Archives

Introduction

The Rockefeller Archive Center occasionally publishes cross-collection surveys of its material related to particular subjects. In the past surveys have focused on African-American welfare and education, child studies, China, labor and industrial relations, nursing, psychiatry, and 20th-century Africa. With this survey we focus on the media technologies new to the 20th-century – film, radio and television – and how they are represented in the Center's collections both as tools to be used for education, propaganda, and business profit, and as the subjects of study toward an understanding of how these new media were received and perceived by their audience and how they functioned within society.

Several of the philanthropies represented in the Center's collections used the new media in educational campaigns. The Rockefeller Foundation (RF) used film as part of its public health campaigns in the South and in other countries as early as the 1910s; the American International Association (AIA) used radio as an educational tool for nutrition programs; both the RF and the General Education Board (GEB) promoted experimental educational uses of both radio and film; and both the Rockefeller Brothers Fund and the John and Mary Markle Foundation were active supporters of educational television. In politics, Nelson A. Rockefeller made use of the media in his campaigns for governor of New York and especially in his campaigns for the Republican presidential nomination, and his papers provide interesting documentation of the use of the media at the dawn of the television age.

At the same time that they were promoting its use as an educational tool, the GEB and the RF also were funding studies of how the media functions in societies, beginning with studies of audience response to the radio broadcast of "War of the Worlds" by Orson Welles and continuing through studies of wartime propaganda in the 1940s and the creation of the discipline of mass communications studies at various universities. The role of the media, especially television, in society became the subject of increasing public concern and academic inquiry, as manifest in the Social Science Research Council's Committee in Television and Social Behavior, and the new focus after 1969 on mass communications in a democratic society at the Markle Foundation under the leadership of Lloyd Morrisett.

During the 1960s and 1970s, the RF supported particular film and video productions, including documenting visually the work of several dance companies, that indicated a growing awareness of film and video as artistic media as well as tools of communication. The RF also worked to support individual film and video artists and helped support the development of production facilities for independent artists in various regions, including the San Francisco Bay area, Boston, Los Angeles, Chicago, and New York.

Scholarship in these Collections

A number of researchers have published articles, books and dissertations that draw upon these materials; the literature of which the Archive Center is aware is listed in the "Mass Communications" section of the Bibliography of Scholarship from the Rockefeller Archive Center, accessible online from the Publications section of our website at <http://archive.rockefeller.edu/>. In addition, the Center's website includes an essay by William J. Buxton, "Rockefeller Support for Projects on the Use of Motion Pictures for Educational and Public Purposes, 1935-1954," accessible from the Research Reports Online Exclusive portion of our website (<http://archive.rockefeller.edu/publications/resrep/rrolinealpha.php>). Recent relevant essays in RAC publications also include Buxton's "Emergence of the Rockefeller Foundation's Communications Program in the 1930s" (Research Reports, 1996, pp. 3-5) and "GEB Support for School-Broadcasting Projects, 1937-1942" (Research Reports, 2003/2004, p. 8); Gisela Cramer's "The Office of Inter-American Affairs and the Latin American Mass Media, 1940-1946" (Research Reports 2001, pp. 14-16, and Research Reports 2002, pp. 14-17); and Darwin Stapleton's "Director's Comment: An Invasion from Mars" (Newsletter, 2001, pp. 2, 12), all accessible online. The Archive Center website also includes "The Rockefeller Foundation's 1925 Malaria Film," an essay by Marianne Fedunkiwi for a conference in November 2003, at <http://archive.rockefeller.edu/publications/conferences/fedunkiwi.pdf>

We hope that this survey will foster new research in these records related to radio, film and television, and we welcome inquiries.

User's Guide

This survey presents the results of a search for material related to radio, film and television in the archival collections located at the Rockefeller Archive Center. The detailed finding aids – the box and folder lists – for the collections, rather than the collections themselves, formed the basis for the search. Because the finding aids list the titles of the folders in each collection, this is not a document-by-document inventory but rather a general description of the contents of each folder. This description usually includes a name or institution, some subject designation, and the range of dates of the documents in the folder.

Readers are advised that, although the compilers have listed here as much material as could be identified as relevant to radio, film and television history, some individuals or institutions may have been overlooked. Thus, researchers should use this as a guide to the collections and not as the definitive, exhaustive list of all material relevant to radio, film and television history available at the Rockefeller Archive Center. Readers who believe that the collections might prove useful for their research projects, regardless of whether relevant material is listed here, should write to the Executive Director of the Archive Center describing the project and any important individuals and institutions who are its subjects, and the Center's staff will respond with a summary of relevant material.

The following discussion describes the components of the survey. Abbreviations used in the survey appear at the end of the User's Guide, along with a list of the collections for which material has been included in this survey.

Note that this survey does not include a list of films located in the Center's collections.

COLUMN HEADINGS

Folder Title

The entries in this survey are listed alphabetically by folder title. In those instances where we know that large groups of material (record groups, series, or perhaps small collections) contain useful but scattered items about radio, film or television (rather than entire folders about a specific institution or individual), we have included an entry for that series, record group, or collection. In the vast majority of cases, however, entry names are folder titles, and this usually means that the person or institution names on the folder received philanthropic support from, or had repeated contact with, the organization in whose archives the folder appears, which is listed in the "Collection" column.

Description

The descriptions given here are taken from the finding aids prepared by the archivists who processed the collections. In only a few cases have we actually gone back to look at the material to enhance a description. The names of individuals appearing in this column indicates that the folder(s) contain correspondence from this person.

Collection

This column designates the archival collection in which the folder in the “Folder Title” column can be found. A list of the abbreviations used in this column is located at the end of the User’s Guide, and in the “Collections Represented in this Survey” section that follows.

Record Group, Series, Box and Folder Number

These columns provide more specific information about the location of material within an archival collection. Record groups and series are smaller divisions within collections, usually denoting the office from which material came, the subject matter of the material, or a geographic location. Archivists for the most part use the same classification or filing system as the person or organization that created these records, rather than imposing a new order on the material. Entries that have box numbers but no folder numbers represent material that has not yet been processed (reviewed and organized) by an archivist.

Abbreviations

The following are abbreviations used in the description column. This listing does not include standard abbreviations for state names or for personal names, such as Robt. for Robert.

COLLECTIONS REPRESENTED IN THIS SURVEY

(AIA) American International Association Archives, 1946-1968

Series AIA

Series CIDEA (Consejo Interamericano de Education Alimenticia)
[Interamerican Council on Nutrition Education]

The American International Association for Economic and Social Development (AIA), established by Nelson A. Rockefeller in 1946, aimed to promote "self-development and better standards of living, together with understanding and cooperation" in Latin America. AIA efforts concentrated on cooperative programs with the governments of Brazil and Venezuela. The programs provided information about and assistance with farming, homemaking, health, and nutrition.

(GEB) General Education Board Archives, (1901-1964)-1967

Series 1.2, Secondary and Higher Education, 1902-1967

Series 1.3, Southern Secondary and Elementary Education (some college), 1931-1961

The General Education Board (GEB) was established in 1903 by John D. Rockefeller to aid education in the U.S. "without distinction of race, sex or creed." The program included grants for endowment and general budgetary support of colleges and universities, support for special programs, fellowship and scholarship assistance to state school systems at all levels, and development of social and economic resources as a route to improved educational systems. Major colleges and universities across the U.S., as well as many small institutions in every state, received aid from the Board.

(Markey) Lucille P. Markey Charitable Trust Records, 1983-1996

Series 2.

Established as a limited term trust in the will of Lucille P. Markey in 1975, the trust began operation in 1983 and terminated in 1997. Mrs. Markey was the owner of the Calumet Farm, the thoroughbred breeding and racing concern. The bulk of her estate, however, derived from a large interest in an oil and gas lease in Texas inherited from her first husband, Warren Wright, the owner of the Calumet Baking Powder Company. Mrs. Markey designated that her fortune be dedicated to "human health," which was later formally translated into the support of "basic medical research" in her will. During the fourteen-year term of the trust, over $500 million was distributed in grants to recognized senior scientists, general organizational grants for the training and education of Ph.D.'s and M.D.'s pursuing careers in biomedical research, and scholarships and fellowships to younger researchers.

(Markle) John and Mary R. Markle Foundation Records, 1927-1980

Record Group 1, Series 3, Communications

Record Group 2, Series 3.2, Publications–President's Essays

John Markle (1858-1933), a mining company executive, and his wife Mary established the foundation in 1927 "to promote the general good of mankind." Between 1936 and 1969 the foundation's primary focus was support for medical research. In 1947 the foundation initiated a new program, the Markle Scholar Program, which made grants to doctors at academic medical institutions to enable them to continue research and teaching rather than enter private practice. The Markle Scholar Program was terminated in 1969 and the foundation began to fund projects in mass communications, and it is this program that is represented in this survey.

(RBF) Rockefeller Brothers Fund Archives, 1941-1989

Series 3, Grants

The Rockefeller Brothers Fund (RBF) was established in 1940 by John D. 3rd, Nelson A., Laurance S., Winthrop, and David Rockefeller. The RBF makes grants to local, national, and international philanthropic organizations that depend on the general public for funds. As a general rule, contributions are made to agencies whose activities reach a large number of people. The RBF's program also includes support for, and in some instances direct operation of, experimental or new undertakings.

(FM) Rockefeller Family Archives, 1879-1979.

The Rockefeller Family Archives include the papers of John D. Rockefeller (1839-1937), John D. Rockefeller, Jr. (1874-1960) and his wife, Abby Aldrich Rockefeller (1874-1948) and their children: Abby (1903-1976), John 3rd (1906-1978), Nelson A. (1908-1979), Laurance S. (1910-2004), Winthrop (1912-1973), and David (1915-). The papers of Nelson A. Rockefeller are located in several record groups throughout the Rockefeller Family Archives. Material pertaining to living members of the Rockefeller Family is not available for research.

(RF) Rockefeller Foundation Archives, 1912-1980.

The Rockefeller Foundation (RF) was established in 1913 by John D. Rockefeller "to promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world." From its earliest years, the Foundation has been both a grant-making and direct operating institution. It has given more than $1.8 billion to thousands of grantees worldwide and has assisted directly in the training of nearly 13,000 Rockefeller Fellows.

Record Group 1, Projects

These project, or grant, files constitute the largest portion of the RF archives. Project files document the life cycle of a grant from initial inquiries to the conclusion of the grant. Records typically include correspondence, grant proposals and project descriptions, progress reports, institutional minutes, internal RF reports, publications, RF officer diary excerpts, and Foundation grant actions

Record Group 5, International Health Board/Division

In 1913, the RF established the International Health Board for the purpose of extending the work of the Rockefeller Sanitary Commission for the Eradication of Hookworm Disease. In addition to hookworm, its early public health activities included control of yellow fever, malaria, tuberculosis, public health education, virus studies and related research. In 1927, the Board was reorganized as the International Health Division of the RF. In 1951, the International Health Division was merged with the medical sciences program and public health activity was de-emphasized. Film was an important part of its public health education campaigns.

(SSRC) Social Science Research Council Records, 1924-1990

The Social Science Research Council (SSRC) is a private, not-for-profit organization established in 1923 to advance research in the social sciences.
